PROGRAM DETAILS

- RCO's three-phase one-year program begins with an intensive peer-based focus on all dimensions of well being and directs each resident toward a self-sustaining model of full-time employment and accountability.
- The first phase has an entry fee cost of $1,500 and covers up to three months of residential services in a structured environment. Each resident will partake in three RCO classes a day while also attending local recovery meetings as well as regularly scheduled one-on-one peer specialist meetings. Community service and recovery outreach in the area will become a regular occurrence for each residence.
- Phase II begins when the resident maintains part-time employment and/or schooling as well as beginning their self-sustainable model by paying the $500 monthly fee for the RCO program. Recovery capital classes continue during the week alongside a peer specialist while implementing their goal-based recovery plan for the future with an improved demonstration of honesty, integrity and selflessness.
- Phase III features full-time employment and/or schooling with residence fees remaining at $500 monthly. Financial stability becomes a working principle in each resident's life while continuing community service and building recovery capital from a holistic approach. Plans for transitional living begin in preparation for graduation.
- Completion of the Recovery Center of the Ozarks program includes a peer-based and resident-planned process into transitional living as each individual moves toward a mentorship role in the program. The recovery plan remains in motion with a designed plan for living away from all substance use.
